FROM THE CAPITAL.

A CASE OF REPUBLICAN JUSTICE.

The Admission of Ball from Alaska—Something We Have Heard Before on the Hempfield Extension—Change of Front on Statham's Confirmation—Dibble's Case-Notes.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, January 31.—The Committee on Elections at its meeting to-day settled the first election case of the session by dismissing Lanier's contest against King in the Fifth Louisiana district, as a representative case from the worst section in the South. The Democratic party ought after this to stifle all cries of injustice, unfairness and partisanship against the Republican majority of the Forty-seventh Congress. There is not the slightest doubt that under the leadership of King's canvassers and strikers intimidation was carried to its true Southern extent in this district of Louisiana, which is largely Republican; and it is whispered that the member from the Fifth district is no mean leader of a canvass of this kind himself. Under these circumstances Lanier came here with a good case and no testimony, and depended upon his own affidavit and the partisanship of the Committee to carry him through. The Committee gave him every opportunity to get his testimony, and finding that he had made no effort, to-day dismissed the case, thus seating King.

THE GENTLEMAN FROM ALASKA.

The Claim of Ball as Delegate from Alaska Considered.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, January 31.—Messrs. William G. Thompson and Gibson Atherton, the sub-committee of the Committee on Elections, to which was referred the case of M. D. Ball, who claims to be the delegate from Alaska, reported to the full committee to-day, recommending the seating of the petitioner. The committee submitted a long and elaborate report, in which the question was thoroughly canvassed. The committee find that when the United States purchased Alaska in 1867, it, by treaty in plain terms, gave all the inhabitants a right to continue their allegiance to Russia for three years and at the end of that time to leave the country, or if they choose to remain giving them all the rights, immunities and privileges, social and political, of the citizens of the United States. This being an absolute and unconditional pledge a refusal to receive the delegate sent by them would be in clear violation of the plain duties of the Government. The committee goes on to review the extent and richness of the territory and to dwell upon the magnitude of the interests for which the people demand protection. It also cites as a precedent the case of James White, who, in the Third Congress, in 1794, presented his credentials as a delegate from all the territories west of the Ohio river and was subsequently admitted. In conclusion the committee recommends that M. D. Ball be admitted as a duly elected delegate from the territory of Alaska, with all rights and privileges.

AN EXTENSION THAT DOES NOT EXTEND.

Baltimore Papers Say the Hempfield Extension is a Good Thing, and Will be Made.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, January 31.—A Baltimore paper says that some forty or fifty laborers who were at work clearing out Brady's tunnel, an incomplete structure on the Hempfield extension, were discontinued last week, and so far as outside indications show operations have ceased. These movements have been referred to acrimoniously by the press of Wheeling and other places interested in having the road built. It is said, however, that the Baltimore and Ohio contemplates letting the work on the road, which penetrates the coke region of Pennsylvania, and is regarded as an important connection for the Company to build.

The Southern Pennsylvania is reported to be pushing its way to Wheeling via the coke region country.

The Ohio & Mississippi road has received three new postal cars from the Jackson & Sharp Company of Wilmington, Delaware, which are for the night service between Cincinnati and St. Louis. They combine every improvement known to the Postal Department. They will go into use to-morrow.

The directors on the part of the Baltimore & Ohio in the Pittsburgh railroad, are to be Thomas M. King, Robert Garrett and Samuel Spencer.

THEIR ARDOR COOLED.

The Former Rampant Opposition to Statham Suddenly Cools.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, January 31.—Mr. Statham, postmaster at Lynchburg, was confirmed to-day by the Senate. Mr. Statham is the gentleman—readjuster by persuasion—who sometime previous to the Virginia election was nominated by the President in place of a former Republican and a Union soldier and who had a most disagreeable habit of getting caught up in his accounts and who always came out a little short. Mr. Statham's nomination, it will be remembered, was rapidly opposed by the Democratic leaders like Johnston, Beck, Voorhies, et al., who asserted that they would not see a Union soldier trampled upon, and that justice should be done him, if the heavens fell. Statham was confirmed to-day without a Democratic squeak against him, even Mr. Johnston, of Virginia, did not seem to find any interest in the proceedings.

PARIS, January 31.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, De Freynet read the programme of the new Cabinet. It sets forth that the programme of the Government will be one, above all, calculated to establish peace in the minds of the people, and at home and abroad it will be firm and conciliatory. Liberty and progress are necessary for France. The Government will apply in a liberal sense the laws relative to the press and the right of public meetings. A bill will be submitted sanctioning the right of association while maintaining rights of state.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, January 31.—The motion picture by the counsel of Dibble, member of Congress from South Carolina, before the Committee on Elections, was not settled, by the Committee, denying the same. To-day, upon the recommendation of the Sub-committee, which has had the case in

ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

WORTH OF PROPERTY DESTROYED.

In New York Yesterday by Fire—Narrow Escape From a Terrible Conflagration—The Building Remains, Perilous Situation and Heroic Acts Incident to the Occasion.

CLOSE SHAVES.

A man, who gained the roof and escaped by way of the Times building, shouted to the rescuers that other human beings were perishing there. Three men appeared in the fourth-story window imploring aid with outstretched arms. None was possible from without, but a quick-witted man, a bookbinder in Park row, named Charles Wright, climbed the large telegraph pole in front of the Evening Mail and cut the wires, enabling the men to slide down and escape.

Carlos White, of the Pacific Newspaper Publishing Company, had an office on the fourth floor of the burned building. He said: "You can see I have been pretty close to the flames, as my hair, beard and eyebrows are singed, but I only found out after my escape from the building."

THOUGHT THERE WOULD BE A FIRE.

It was not altogether a surprise to me, in fact an hour or two before it broke out, to see the workmen engaged in the building and heard them something of the sort was about to happen. There was something wrong with the heating apparatus, although I can't say just what it was. At all events the walls about the closets were so hot that there was even a danger of some kind. I put my hands upon them and immediately directed the workmen's attention to the fact that they were getting hotter and hotter. "We are going to have a fire," said I, but they treated the matter very lightly, merely saying that it was all right, they could fix it. When the flames did break out they raged with extraordinary fury. They leaped from the bottom to the top of the building like a flash and rolled upward in great sheets.

THE DETAILS OF THE FIRE.

The Times building is saved, but considerably damaged. The flames are confined to Beekman street and Park Row, corner of Nassau street. The building was lost, that of the woman already referred to.

It is stated that four bodies were recovered in Nassau street of persons killed by jumping from the windows. It is feared the loss of life will be heavier than at first believed. The building was ten stories high, and very few could have escaped by the stairways.

HEARTRENDING SCENES.

An old gray haired woman was seen in the fourth story of the World building appealing for help. Her lips were seen to move, but her voice could not be heard. She was seen to be in a state of great distress, and her hands were raised in a gesture of entreaty. The flames raged about her person igniting her hair and clothing. She fell back into the flames and was no doubt burned to death. A young girl wearing a blue dress, who was cut off from the stairs, ran to a fourth story window on Nassau street and stood hesitatingly, while the flames and smoke encircled her. "Jump! Jump!" shouted the spectators. Casting a frightened look below she threw herself out and fell on the stone pavement. Then picked up her hat and rushed to the street, beyond recognition. A few seconds later a negro woman appeared at the third story window of the World office on the Park Row side, and also jumped to the sidewalk. She was badly injured and taken to the Chambers street hospital. Several men and women saved themselves by leaping from the windows in Nassau street. When the woman who was killed jumped from the window there were two men.

HANGING FROM WINDOW SILL BY THEIR FINGER ENDS.

The ladders were too short to reach them, and they were saved by the firemen mounting on one another's shoulders, and the men let themselves down with their aid. The scenes at the time when the occupants of the upper floors were making their escape were often exciting and touching. Men could be seen holding the hands of women, exhorting and encouraging them to calmness. Three women ran to the roof and fell through the skylight of one of the northern buildings, receiving serious injuries. A bookbinder on the corner of Nassau street and Park Row, seeing some men entangled in the telegraph wires adjoining the burning premises, climbed the pole and cut the wires, releasing them from a critical position.

CRITICAL SITUATION.

Several persons descended from the burning building on the Nassau street side by means of the telegraph pole. One boy leaped from the fifth story, and would doubtless have been killed but for the wires breaking his fall. He was hurt badly, but not dangerously. An express wagon, driven up to the window, was used to help the escape of the occupants. A man was seen to leap to the ground were told by the driver to jump on the wagon, which they did, escaping any serious hurt. One young woman stood upon the window sill of the fourth story until the firemen arranged a large piece of canvas, with their help by the ends and sides, and when all was ready, she threw her hands straight over her head and jumped. She fell upon the outstretched canvas and escaped injury. The firemen then lowered her to the ground, and she was taken to the hospital.

Among the occupants of the burned buildings were the Scientific American, the South-American Journal, the Turf, Field and Farm and the Southern Bank Note Reporter. The firemen were assisted by agents S. M. Pettigill & Co., John T. Phillips & Co., Charles Meyer & Co., J. Walter Thompson, Nicola Monachese, T. R. Thompson, Levi A. Deabon and Leonard H. Crall.
